

Is improbable that anyone expected great decistons would be made at the Vienna conference be-tween President Kennedy and Mr Khrushchev. These two powerful and dynamic leaders met on even ground; they met for the first time in what was apparently a cordial at-- mosphere divorced from the unpleasantness which ruined the Paris summit conference befores it had even started.

Neither side had any trump cards such as the unfortunate U-2 incident to play and one must assume that both leaders were feeling their way over the various problems which have been plaguing the world during the past few years.

It would appear that both Mr Kennedy and Mr Khrushchev got through their talks without any harsh words and this alone is reason for a measure of optimism, although such optimism must be regarded with caution.

Taken stock

THE best that can be said is that the two leaders have made each other's acquaintance and know exactly where they stand.

They have undoubtedly taken stock of each other and now must have a better idea of what East and West is prepared to tolerate.

The possibility of miscalculation and floundering into a nuclear war has been reduced and there should be widespread relief throughout the world that there can be no misunderstanding of motives in either camp.

As far as Mr Khrushchev is concerned, he has accomplished his mission and made an assessment of the young man who has taken over the leadership of the opposition to communism.

The same, of course, can be said of President Kennedy. He has taken his opponent's measure and is under no illusions about the man from the Kremlin.

Washington, June 6. President Kennedy tonight described his meeting with Mr Khrushchev in Vienna as a "very sober two days" in which "no advantage or concession was either gained or given."

In a nationwide television broadcast from the White House, he said: "No major decision was either planned or taken. No spectacular progress was either achieved or pretended."

He said that he and Mr Khrushchev did not plan any future summit meetings, but said his Vienna talks had been "useful."

TACKLE EUROPEAN INFLATION

Paris, June 6. 'Yes, but what's sending prices up?' One can almost hear the indulgent chuckles as some heckler calls this question out at a political meeting—and visualise the orator flexing his knees as he prepares a crushing response.

It is the sort of question any saloon bar economist finds child's play to answer. To the Organisation for European Economic Co-operation (OEEC), it is more complex.

Milton Gilbert, economic adviser to the Bank of International Settlements in Basic, Professor Bent Hansen, Director of the Stockholm National Institute for Economic Research. Bureau of the Hilpine.

The purpose of the report, besides isolating causes of higher prices, is to help solve European inflation problems. The experts agree that inflation cannot be solved once and for all and needs constant attention. But some of its dangers can be eliminated,

FOUR REASONS

Four things, the experts find, cause prices to go up. The fir: ; is a series of special factors such as relaxation of rent controls, increases in excise duties (or cuts in subsidies) and bad harvests. Cost of living indexes in all countries were somewhat affected by these special factors, but the effects generally were

WAGES POLICY

The experis, however, could the European countries need not agree on how to deal with to use the tax and monetary wage-cost inflation. The majorcontrols more effectively and ity considers the first essential promptly. Fallure is usually to be for the government to lay down a wages policy for private and public industry just like a monetary or tax policy. The purpose would be to 'give guidance to the large monopolistic groups that now dominate the labour market.'

> This, the majority of the experts insists, does not mean wage control. The basis should Nanvane be a clearly marked wages policy in the public sector of the economy. The minority of the experts is reluctant to have governments interfere with wages in private industry. It hopes that wage increases will be more moderate in the future.

The fourth cause of rising is increases brought about by monopolistic producers seeking higher profits, the report says. This has been 'a significant cause' of rising prices in European industries as a whole since 1952, the experts found. The report concludes that in general, administered prices increases cannot be a cause of continuing inflation, and it recommends greater competition, both domestle and foreign, as the principal means of dealing with this problem.

2714 14214 5031

Chicago, June 6. The 1961 U.S. winter wheat crop was estimated at 1.088.888.000 bushels by Mr C. M. Galvin, crop statistician for Francis I. Du Pont and Company, based on June 1 condi-

It compares with his forecast 1,086,917,000 bushels as of May 1 and the Government estimate at that time of 1,096

Based on current conditions production of the 1901 spring wheat crop is tentatively estimated at 226,667,000 bushels compared with last year's output of 246,312,000.

In view of the delayed scoding 214% and planting of maize, oats and soybeans because of unfavourable apring weather, no reliable jestimates of acreage or . production could be made at this time.-China Mail Special.

New York, June 6. seems reasonable 'to figure that by now half the decline in U.S. industrial production has been made up, the First National City Bank said. Its June bank letter noted that the marked increase in industrial activity during April and May "has crased any 1014 lingering doubts that the 1314 economy is in a very encouraging rebound from recession

CROPS SUFFER

From 3.9 to 7.8 inches of rain fell between June 1 and June 4, the agency said.

Crops and livestock also suffered, the agency added, but

The seriousness of the attitude was underlined by the fact that Prime Minister Diefenbaker himself is handling the statement in the Commons today. It follows continuing talks yesterday among top officials in agri-culture, trade and external affairs. Ministers declined comment.

But one senior informant said that Diefenbaker "will have quite a story to tell."

He sald the government learned about the situation on Monday afternoon and has been working full steam on it ever since, apparently with no success in reshaping the U.S. stand.

The U.S. has refused to allow the export of suctiontype unloading equipment needed for delivery of the Canadian grain at Chinese ports. The ports do not have grain-unloading equipment and Canada, as a grain exporter, does not normally, have any need for such machinery.

ONLY SUPPLIER

A firm in Batavia, Illinois, is the only major supplier of the equipment and it has been refused permission to sell the Kwangtung province of $12,000 units to freighters China were marooned by designed to carry the Canadian wheat to China.

Fire danger: city 'does not care'

London. fire chief has accused thousands of householders of not earing about the safety of their homes.

Mr J. L. Johnson, chief of the fire brigade at Portsmouth-"The City That Cares"-discovered that 22 fires were caused by faulty paraffin heaters last year.

One blaze was fatal, and Mr Johnson decided that the 60,000 householders of Portsmouth needed educating - especially when he heard that one man had set light to his house by filling his paraffin stove with

As a start he offered 2,000 free leaflets on "do's and don'ts" about oll heaters.

But after five months of publicity. Mr Johnson still had 1,970 left on his hands He said: "It's amazing to think that fewer than 30 people out of 250,000 in Portsmouth should be sufficiently interested. They just don't care about whether their home goes up in flames or not." - London Express Service.

London, June 6. Mr H. P. Kraus, a Now York buyer paid £22,000 at Sothebys salercoms here yesterday for a missal with calendar written for use in Paris between 1350 and 1360.

The missal was in the collecand printed books formed by the late Mr Apsley Cherry-Garrard, Antarctic explorer, who was a member of Captain Robert Scott's last expedition and now the property of Mrs Gordon Mathlas.

The missal was probably written for the private chapel of a member of the French Royal family, its 164 vellum leaves were illustrated in gold and colours.

The Duke of Gotha acquired it in 1745 from the collection of J. B. Huhn court preacher. The Earl of Denbigh, sold it at Sothebys in 1950. — China Mall

BARTER BRAINS

By CHAPMAN PINCHER

FTER three years of pretending that it did not really matter who got to the moon first, the U.S. has formally taken up the Russians' challenge to race them there.

The technical resources of the world's two most powerful nations are to be harnessed to this tremendous adventure which will fill the next nine years with wonder. What a time to be alive! What an adventure to be in! What an adventure for Britain to be in!

The cost of a crash programme to put an American on the moon and bring him back allye is estimated at £14,000 millions. The Russians, who will undoubtedly speed up their endeavours, must be facing similar costs.

Can this colossal outlay be justified for such a Jeff Hawke concept? Look at it this way: Spread over nine years it will cost the 182 million people of the American nation about 6d. a day per head.
